Regional News Round-Up

The Winchester Regional Airport Authority will seek a meeting with the Frederick County Board of Supervisors to request a reduction on aircraft personal property taxes, according to the Northern Virginia Daily. The current tax rate is 42.5¢ per $100 of assessed value. Authority member Richard Largent said that lowering the rate "could be a great incentive for aircraft to come over, but it doesn't put a lot of money into the coffers of Frederick County. Is it the answer? Probably not completely, but it's one piece of the pie."

Stafford Regional Airport Authority Chairman Hank Scharpenberg has informed the County Board of Supervisors that the airport will decrease the operating subsidy it needs from its three supporting localities: Fredericksburg, Stafford County and Prince William County. Airport Manager Ed Wallis told the Free Lance-Star that in the past year, hangar rentals have doubled; of the 40 hangars, only three remain empty. Wallis attributes the turnaround to the supervisors, who voted in 2009 to essentially eliminate the county's personal-property tax on aircraft. Stafford paid $114,285 to the airport in the current fiscal year, but tentatively will be asked to pay only $85,214 in the upcoming fiscal year.

Easton Airport has received two federal grants totaling $1.5 million to replace and widen a tarmac; install a new drainage system under the tarmac; and cut trees to proper height requirements. The work is expected to be finished by the end of the summer and to not affect operations.

Salisbury-Ocean City: Wicomico Regional Airport is seeking $2 million in federal grants to build a taxiway alongside its newly-extended runway and to relocate navigational aids. Airport Manager Bob Bryant told the Delmarva Daily Times that the runway extension had been on the airport's master plan since 1980 and that "[t]he purpose of the 900-foot taxiway extension is to avoid safety concerns. It gets (planes) on and off the runway much more efficiently."

GWBA's Treasurer, Jim Garland, was profiled on April 12 in the Washington Post; the column recounted the evolution over the past twenty years of Garland's Dulles-based aircraft cleaning and detailing company, Sharp Details. The article, by Thomas Heath, can be viewed online at <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/11/AR2010041102828.html>.

On March 20, a Piper Lance landing at Lee Airport experienced a gear collapse; on March 25, a Cessna 120 crashed in the South River near Annapolis shortly after take-off from Lee Airport; and on March 30, a Cessna 182 made an emergency landing near Frederick Municipal Airport. No serious injuries have been reported. As always, fly safely!
